Lusitania Red Cross Benefit.

One of the memorable events of the week will occur Friday afternoon at the Columbia Theater in the Red Cross benefit for the sufferers by the sinking of the Lusitania. Distinguished talent has volunteered its services for the occasion and it will be the first response to a humanly sympathetic appeal. The Red Cross, of course, does not entertain for profit, but its name to matters of that kind, but every cent derived from the forthcoming benefit will be handed over to the Red Cross, under the direction of Miss Mabel T. Boardman, of that society, to be distributed where it is most needed. Film Features.

"The Eternal City" Filmed.

An elaborate photograph of Hall Caine's powerful story, "The Eternal City," will be presented at the Columbia Theater next week. The photograph is of a high order and is said to mark a new epoch in photoproduction. The celebrated story is presented with all the thrilling incidents and climaxes, the romance and tragedy, the elements of love and betrayal and the beautiful ideals and humanities of the original plot, but with a wider range, in truer colors and with bolder strokes than were possible in the stage production.

The picture was taken in Italy and England in the exact locale in which the action occurs. Scenes are shown in the Vatican gardens, in the Castle of St. Angelo, the Coliseum, the famous Roman Forum and other historical spots in the imperial city. Sunday the photograph will be shown continuously from 3 to 11 p.m., and on week days at two-hour intervals from noon to 11 p.m.

Next week's program of show plays at Grandall's Theater will show Monday and Tuesday in pictures Orin Johnson and Olive Wyndham in the latest photoplay feature, "Fighting Grandall's.

Next week's program of show plays at Grandall's Theater will show Monday and Tuesday in pictures Orin Johnson and Olive Wyndham in the latest photoplay feature, "Fighting Bob," which is said to picture many situations of the fighting life in Mexico. The featured event for a three-day program will be "A Woman's Resurrection," a photoplay based on Count Leo Tolstoy's novel, which will be shown Wednesday, Thursday and Friday. Saturday the main attraction will be "Fine Feathers," a five-part photoplay with Miss Janet Beecher, the Broadway star, in the leading role. At every performance the music will be by Prof. Green's orchestra and the pipe organ.

Empress.

Big features are booked to head every day's program of picture plays at the Empress Theater for next week. Sunday, Mary Pickford will be featured in "Fanchon the Cricket," and it is announced the Empress Theater has the sole franchise for showing this picture. Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday Elsie Janis will be pictured in a five-part comedy written by herself, entitled "Betty in Search of a Thrill," showing the pitfalls into which an inexperienced girl may fall. The scenes of the play are said to have been taken by special permission on the private estate of a noted American millionaire, which is famous for its landscape gardening. Thursday, Friday and Saturday two photoplays in a single release will be presented in "Bootsie Baby," the story by John Strain Weir, and "The Man on the Case," by Grace Livingston Furness, a noted comedy. Appropriate music is furnished for all pictures.

STUDENTS TO RECEIVE MILITARY INSTRUCTION

War Department's Camp Proposition Held by Controller Downey to Be Legal.

While "student camps," as such, declared an unlawful expense against government funds by repeated decisions of the controller of the Treasury, George E. Downey still remains taboo, a way has been found, in which students in the military art. The War Department now proposes the acceptable proposition for the establishment of camps of instruction for regular troops, making provision for the presence at such camps, "for their practical and theoretical military instruction, of men between the ages of eighteen and twenty of such physical and other qualifications as shall be required and specified by the War Department in regulations, provided no expense to the United States is incurred thereby." It appears that the proposed camps are to be camps of the regular troops, comments Controller Downey, "and that the establishment of such camps is intended to serve a fourfold purpose: "Instruction and demonstration of principles of tactics and field maneuvering; "To permit students and others to attend the camps under regulations established by the War Department; "To obtain a roster of eligibles; "To obtain a roster of persons whose proficiency for commission in the volunteer ranks is demonstrated, in the information of the President, in the execution by him of the provisions of the act of April 25, 1914, in event of actual or threatened war; "To foster a patriotic spirit among citizens, especially young men, of the country."

"It is thus made to appear that the establishment of military camps in the present summer is of and for the regular troops and for the promotion of their military efficiency, and that the instruction of students and others is a subordinate and secondary purpose, and that the establishment of such camps is not the main object or purpose to be sought, as shown in previous orders involved in the former decisions of this office on the question."

"The office has always recognized the right of the War Department to control the regular army, and to do what in its judgment, and not contrary to law, will promote its efficiency. I am of opinion that the reasonable and necessary expenses incident to the proposed general order will constitute a proper charge against the proper appropriation for the support of the army."

CHINESE LAUNDRYMAN BURIED WITH CEREMONY
All Lee Yong's Garments Burned and Food Is Placed on Grave to Aid Flight of Spirit.

Several carriages in which Chinese residents of lower Pennsylvania avenue rode followed the body of Lee Yong, a native of the Flowery kingdom, to Congressional cemetery Monday afternoon. Lee Yong was fifty-six years old, a laundryman, and was one of the best known residents of Chinatown.

Six years ago Yong came to this city. Lee was taken ill some time ago and his ailment was diagnosed as liver trouble. Being desirous of prolonging life until he could arrange to return to the land of his birth, Lee sought treatment at Providence Hospital. When the patient reached the hospital his condition was so serious that practically no hope for his recovery was held out to his nearest relatives who looked after him, and Sunday he died. On the way to the cemetery slips of paper were dropped along the street. The paper was supposed to interfere with the evil spirits so greatly that they would forget the spirit of the departed. At the grave there was the usual Chinese ceremony of burning the effects of the deceased and placing rice, chicken and Chinese "good things" on the grave to assist the spirit further in its flight to another world. Chinese mourners stood about the grave and saw that the last vestige of Lee Yong's garments was reduced to ashes. They said something in their native language, and when the grave had been filled and the "good things" properly placed they returned to Chinatown to resume the sale of Chinese merchandise or to do their laundry work.

"So you're convinced that your novel is hopeless?" "Absolutely," replied the author. "I am convinced that I will after I changed it into a war story." Life.

"Briggs must be dreadfully extravagant. He never seems to have a cent." "Tried to borrow from you, did he?" "No, but hang it, I wanted to borrow from him."—Boston Transcript.
